Goodwin certainly knew from the time he wrote in Book Week that a new investigation is needed that it was unsafe for the Kennedy name to be associated with any account of the assassination itslef, whether it be that of the Commission, which presented less hazard, or that of Manchester, which would be accounted as theirs. It is he of all the former Kennedy staff, including those with more legal experience, who acted publicly as Mrs. Kennedy's counsel in her dispute and suits with Look and Harper & Row
